- 18 (3) The child has a demonstrated propensity to run away from the child's home, from 19 court-ordered placement outside of the child's home or from agencies charged with 20 providing temporary care for the child;

- 22 (5) There are specific, articulated circumstances which justify the detention for the 25 The child may be held in detention up to an additional twenty-four hours following the 26 temporary custody hearing pending transfer to shelter or release.

1 If the child is accused of or has been found in violation of a valid court order, the child
2 may be placed in detention for more than twenty-four hours, if a temporary custody
3 hearing, pursuant to § 26-7A-14, is held within twenty-four hours of the child being placed 4 in a detention facility, an interview is conducted with the child, ~~and~~ a written assessment
5 of the child's immediate needs is provided at the temporary custody hearing, and a written

7 available placement, specifies the length of time the child is to be held in detention, and 8 outlines the plan for release of the child from detention. The interview and assessment 9 may be conducted by law enforcement, states attorney, court services, or other public 10 employee. The child may not be held in detention ~~greater more than seventy two hours~~

13 runaway or as a person under court-ordered detention, the child may be placed in 14 detention for more than twenty-four hours, and up to seven days, if a temporary custody
15 hearing, pursuant to § 26-7A-14, is held within twenty-four hours of the child being placed
